Copper Flats is a boon dogle, the stock itself is worthless, the mine would potentially use an exorbitant amount of water, leave a toxic pit, pollute the air, and the company does not have the money to assure that there would be a way to clean up after they have gone. I would contest what they way would be the amount of jobs and the wages paid. The top jobs will be given to out of state employees, leaving the lowest paid workers to do the grunt work. The noise and dust and traffic would negatively affect the lives of those in the Animas, Caballo, and Hillsboro. We are the land of enchantment and need first and foremost to protect that. The price of copper does not warrants the investment. When the company can show that their stock is more than penny you can take them seriously. I question all of the figures; given by the company and urge you to investigate whether or not they are truly viable. If we make a mistake there is no going back.
