Subject pipeline

This is nothing but a push from the water district, backed by the very powerful and wealthy developers in Nevada to provide future water paid for by the impoverished and hapless taxpayers, to enable more building and more income for the developers. Also suffering would be the people and the ecosystems of rural Nevada.

It would be nice to be in a perpetual expansion mode, as Clark Co. has been in for much of the past 50 years, but at some point there isn't enough water to support additional growth, and after watching Lake Mead dry up at an alarming rate over the last several years, it appears that we are in denial to remain in the expansion and growth mindset. Time for the developers to set their sights on other areas of the country where water isn't scarce.

The future of jobs and growth in Nevada should be in the renewable energy sector. The developers and their puppet, Pat Mulroy should pull off their blinders and pursue their fortunes there.

Corporate America is in fiscal decline and needs to be more visionary, as their forefathers were. Remember "Yankee ingenuity"?

NO to the pipeline!
