

February 26, 2015

Tri RAC comment letter

Nevada RAC,

We support the efforts of the RAC and BLM working forward to create a productive conversation toward problem solving. However a lack of historic action has created an urgency to address a broken system that has been enabled far too long.

In Nevada we face new challenges that require we abandon old habits and embrace modern tools to protect our cherished western landscape.

We will continue to engage RAC meetings and BLM in working toward sane and sensible management plans for wild horses and burros. These plans must have at the core a sincere effort to gain protection of this truly unique American treasure.

We must begin our process by rejecting outdated methodology that has failed. We must create a strong framework based on hard data and commitment to resolve the historic degradation of our ranges.

Myself, and members of Wild Horse Education, look forward to the coming year where we face daunting challenges boldly and embrace new technology and common sense.

I look forward to engaging local RACs as the year moves forward.

Laura Leigh
President, Wild Horse Education
Nevada