

Cat Deakins
<cat@catdeakins.com>

vegeis@nv.blm.gov

To

12/20/2005 08:20
AM

cc

Subject
NO pesticides on public wilderness!

1 wildfires are a natural part of the wilderness. There is a natural order in the chaos which our puny human brains can't quite comprehend. If we try to meddle with things in order to control them for our own selfish, egoistic purposes, we will end up destroy them. We will destroy the beautiful things which we love, just like Frankenstein did in the old black and white movie when he threw the little girl into the lake and drowned her because he thought she looked like a pretty flower.

2 this obsession to keep out "non-native" and "invasive" weeds is just another false idea that we actually have control over delicate ecological systems with our blunt chemical tools. These chemical pesticides truly are weapons of mass destruction. When we try to keep out invasive weeds, we inevitably kill benign species as well. We end up destroying much more than we think we are saving. And, we poison each other, the environment, the ground and groundwater for the infinite future.

3 our actions have repercussions which we can't imagine. All the evidence we have, though, indicates that the SMALLEST amount of exposure to pesticides, herbicides and other chemicals, the BETTER. Let's use common sense instead of buying into the obsession our society has with wasting money and resources on trying to control and sterilize a wonderful, wild, treasure which we barely understand. Let's not destroy that which we love by using our modern black-magic, in the form of chemicals which we barely understand. Let's not give money to the chemical and pesticide producers, whose main concern is only to fatten their wallets, with no forethought about future horrible ramifications.

4 DO NOT PASS THIS PROPOSAL. there WILL be massive protest to it. Let's stop it before it starts.

Thank you for listening and doing the right thing--
Cat Deakins

Cat Deakins
2nd year MFA student - Cinematography/Directing
UCLA School of Film, Television & Digital Media
(917) 776-5841
cat@catdeakins.com